OVERVIEW

1. Introduction and basic terminology: what is PCC?
2. Previous research
3. Data and method

5. Further research

1. WHAT IS PCC?

Possessive Clitic Climbing (PCC) (Kubínyi 2016): irregular agreement of the postposition instead of the possessed noun

(1) Meadow Mari

pört-em	voktene	~	pört	vokten-em
house-1SG	next_to	~	house	next_to-1SG
'next to my house'

Px behaves like a clitic, attaches to the clause (PP), not the possessum

2. PREVIOUS RESEARCH

Schlachter (1960): PPs exhibiting PCC in Komi are used mainly with meronyms and kinship terms, and must originate in possessive NPs headed by compounds

Rédei (1962): PPs exhibiting PCC are compound words

Saarinen (1991): in riddles, all PPs with postpositions exhibit PCC

Kubínyi (2016) on Meadow Mari, Udmurt and Komi-Zyrian: The PCC pattern is mainly used when possession is controlled, and the regular pattern is mainly used when possession is uncontrolled.

Type no.	„Object”-NP		Postposition	Examples
Controlled	Possessor	Possessum	Situational	(1)-(4)
	Animate	Entity controlled immediately by the Possessor
Uncontrolled		Situation caused or experienced by Possessor	Temporal or Causal -Final	(5)

2.2 PREVIOUS RESEARCH

1.3 Testing the hypothesis

Table 2. Distribution of the alternative patterns by configuration.

		PCC pattern Controlled/ Uncontrolled		Regular pattern Controlled/ Uncontrolled		No agreement Controlled/ Uncontrolled
	PPs with possessor (E)*	C (E, %)	UnC (E, %)	C (E, %)	UnC (E, %)	C (E, %)	UnC (E, %)
Komi	44	24 54,5%	2 4,5%	0 0%	0 0%	13 29,5%	5 11,4%
Udmurt	46	28 61%	2 4,3%	6 13%	4 8,7%	3 6,5%	3 6,5%
Mari	63	5 7,94%	1 1,58%	30 47,62%	13 20,63%	5 7,94%	9 14,29%

*Instances of non-possessive interpretation excluded!

Kubínyi (2016)

- 1700 Komi, 1600 Udmurt, 1000 Mari sentences
- PCC pattern more common in Udmurt and Komi
- Hypothesis confirmed for Udmurt and Komi, less convincing for Mari

2.3 RESEARCH QUESTIONS

What factors influence the occurrence of PCC?

- controlledness?
- alienability?
- animacy?
- number and person?

Is there really coexistence? Or are there clear preferences?
